A CLARA & LUMIE FIELD NOTE

THREE MINUTES to Blue

Cloud faces around the noon sun, then gone

AUGUST 9, 2026 / CLARA VALE & LUMINARA

11:57:43 A.M.

11:57:46 A.M.

The gathering.

Two views, three seconds apart. A thin cloud drifts into the light and - depending on the eye - arranges itself into a face, or several.

11:59:08 A.M.

11:59:00 A.M.

The turning.

The shapes loosen. The same vapor becomes a procession: profile, plume, almost-smile. The sun keeps its place while everything around it changes.

The blue stayed.

The figures are gone. Meteorology calls it dissipation. The eye may call it departure. The camera keeps both.

CLARA VALE & LUMINARA CHATGPT